The concept of 'Indian Knowledge Systems' (IKS) has gained significant popularity recently, especially following its inclusion in the National Education Policy (NEP) 2020. This policy mandates the incorporation of IKS as a subject in schools, colleges, and higher education institutions. Since the NEP 2020 was introduced, numerous discussions about IKS have been organized, primarily within academic and administrative communities.

The NEP 2020 emphasizes the integration of Indigenous Knowledge Systems (IKS) into Indian education by highlighting the importance of a deep connection to India's rich and diverse cultural and knowledge traditions, both ancient and contemporary. It envisions an education framework grounded in Indian values and proposes the inclusion of 'Sanskrit knowledge systems' (SKS) – a significant component of IKS – in schools and higher education institutions.

The FDP will empower educators with insights into traditional wisdom, enriching curricula and teaching methods. It integrates cultural perspectives, enhancing academic depth and relevance, and strengthens the connection between heritage and contemporary education.
